

THE WHOLE WORLD
RARELY AGREES
ON ANYTHING.
IT AGREES ON THIS.

SAVE BRISTOL BAY.
STOP PEBBLE MINE.

© Robert Glenn Ketchum

The International Union for Conservation of Nature, the world's largest body of scientists and environmental experts from more than 170 countries, just announced its opposition to Pebble Mine. The proposed mega-mine—and its 10 billion tons of toxic waste—would threaten the world's greatest wild salmon fishery, risk the livelihoods of Alaska Native communities, and destroy a landscape of indescribable beauty. The IUCN joins a long list of Pebble Mine opponents, including commercial fishermen, sportsmen, Alaskan tribes, conservationists, and the people of Bristol Bay.

